CONCEPT NOTE:

The term ‘socio-economic status’ is an important aspect of any society. This is quite comprehensive term which reflects the information of demographic structure, social processes, norms, mores, habits, traditions, as well as folk’s occupations, economic activities, productions, prevailing skills and technologies etc. of a society. One of the characteristics of the north-eastern state of India is the presence of many ethnic tribes with varied socio-economic and cultural features. Tribes, from nomadic customs to established traditions and from barter system to digital money system, use to live here. Their Socio-economic trends and conditions are changing attributes of every society. These are influenced by the developmental schemes initiated by the governments. The socio- economic phenomena is also the concern of social mindset and will power of people. Studies on these issues may enable the research scholars, academicians, educationists and policy makers to create deep insight into the prevalent situations of the tribal-based society in the north-east region of India. The arrangement of this seminar is an attempt to draw the current progress of socio-economic position of tribal societies in the north-east region. It may encourage research scholars to gather more information about socio-economic status, age-old practices, cultural heritage, skills, sources of livelihood, social relations, expansion of education etc.

The main purpose of organizing this seminar is to develop the spirit of new findings related to the main theme: ‘Socio-Economic Status of Tribal Society in the North-East Region of India: Its Prospects and Challenges’.

Sub-Themes of the Seminar:

- Tribal village economy
- Folk festivals
- Role of woman
- Tribal beliefs and customs
- Traditional institutions
- Traditional food habits
- Family system
- Tribal literacy
- Tribal folk literature
- Any other related topics
